

Aboriginal Tennis Girl Stars

SYDNEY. — Brilliant country youngster Evonne Goolagong yesterday moved a step closer in her ambition to become the first Aborigine to win international tennis honors.

The 13-year-old girl from the tiny Riverina township of Barellan won another two titles in the N.S.W. junior hardcourt championship.

Although conceding age to her opponents, Miss Goolagong won both the under-15 singles and doubles.

She has now won six N.S.W. titles in two years.

In completely outclassing Wendy Gilchrist in the under-15 singles final, Evonne displayed the potential which has prompted critics to acclaim her as a better player than Margaret Smith at the same age.

The slimly built youngster with a flashing smile brought roars of applause from the crowd of more than 500 watching the final.

Evonne dominated the match, displaying a complete range of shots and uncanny courtcraft for such a youngster.

Later, Miss Goola-gong teamed with Frances Luff in winning the under-15 doubles title in straight sets from Wendy Gilchrist and Carol Cousins, 6-3, 8-1.
